September 29, 2006 to September 3, 2007

NEW

A murder has been committed, and three suspects have been identified. Join the investigation and find the culprit! With your assistant by your side, use forensic science to reveal eye-opening information. Your observations, evidence from the crime scene and scientific analysis will give you the results you need to make an arrest.

New at the Museum

Astronomy Programs

Stargazing FREE

October 31 and December 21

Want to view the night sky from the Helen Sawyer Hogg Observatory? Join us as we open our doors to stargazers of all ages.

Strictly weather permitting.

Sleepovers

Become a Detective NEW ACTIVITIES

Pack your enthusiasm, your toothbrush and a sleeping bag, and join us for an exclusive night in the company of a Museum guide. Your group will sneak into the heart of our exhibits, watch a movie, and bunk down beside huge locomotives.

Special Programming

October 14, 17 and 21

National Science and Technology Week

Come to the Museum and celebrate science and technology that impacts everyday life. Take part in fantastic chemistry demonstrations and participate in various activities that are sure to pique your interest in science and technology.

October 31 — 5:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. FREE ADMISSION

Halowe'en

There's trouble afoot at the Museum this Halowe'en: a naughty witch has stolen all of the Museum's candy! Help solve the mystery and save Halowe'en, as you use your detective skills and follow the clues and crack the case. Don't forget to wear your costume!

December 16 and 17

Talk to Santa

Want to talk to Santa before the big day? Here's your chance. Santa will be taking a break from his hard work to talk to young visitors via amateur radio.

December 21 — 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Winter Solstice

Celebrate the shortest day of the year with indoor and outdoor activities that the whole family can enjoy. Take a sleigh ride through the Museum grounds, or try your hand at stargazing as you enjoy a nice cup of hot chocolate! Free admission with a donation to the Ottawa Food Bank.

December 23, 2006 to January 7, 2007

Lights, Camera, Action!
