Chairperson's Message

As part of the criminal justice system, the National Parole Board (NPB or the "Board") is a key player in the maintenance of a just, peaceful and safe society. Specifically, the Board is expected to make conditional release and pardon decisions that support the safe reintegration of offenders in the community.

In February 2009, the NPB marked its 50th anniversary. To honour this event, the Board issued a renewed vision statement entitled "Vision 2020 - Public Safety, Public Service". The work of the Board will be guided by this vision so that we may continue to contribute effectively to public safety and to continue meeting the highest standard of public service. The information presented in the NPB's 2008-09 Departmental Performance Report (DPR) demonstrates that the Board has made significant progress on our plans for improvement, even though the past year has been very challenging.

The Board operates in a very complex environment, with an ever-changing and more difficult offender profile: offenders with longer criminal histories, greater prevalence of violence, more gang affiliations, and more serious substance abuse and mental health issues. There has also been a shift towards shorter federal prison sentences, which affects our required number of reviews. Innovative and effective decision processes must address the needs of Aboriginal offenders and the increasing number of offenders from ethno-racial communities. The Board has also experienced a sharp increase in the demand for pardons, which required internal adjustments to deal with increased volumes and a backlog of applications.

The government has expressed its dedication to meeting the needs of victims, and the NPB has been working to improve the information services it provides to victims, while working closely with stakeholders and partners to ensure an effective and cohesive service delivery. Internally, the Board also experienced new challenges, including the retirement of many of our executives and long-term employees, and the required transfer of knowledge. In 2008-09, the Board was also chosen to participate in a Strategic Review of its programs. While this exercise presented a significant challenge to the Board given its limited resources, the NPB's report was cited as a best practice by the Treasury Board. The Board has begun to implement the findings of the Review.

Despite these challenges, the Board completed 17,565 conditional release reviews (federal and provincial offenders); 93% of parole releases did not commit a new offence and 99% did not commit a new violent offence. Furthermore, 36,000 new pardons applications were received in 2008-09, but the Board was also able to significantly improve the processing time for a pardon and was able to handle 40,428 applications.

These results speak to the great dedication and commitment of our Board members and public service employees who make significant contributions within the public safety portfolio to foster safe and secure communities for Canadians.

Harvey Cenaiko Chairperson, National Parole Board

SECTION I: AGENCY OVERVIEW

Raison d'être

The National Parole Board (NPB or "the Board") is an independent administrative tribunal responsible for making decisions about the timing and conditions of release of offenders to the community on various forms of conditional release. The Board also makes pardon decisions and recommendations respecting elemency through the Royal Prerogative of Mercy (RPM). Public safety is the paramount consideration in NPB decision-making as specified in law and reinforced in the Board's Mission, decision policies, training and operations.

Responsibilities

The Mission:

The National Parole Board, as part of the criminal justice system, makes independent, quality conditional release and pardon decisions and clemency recommendations. The Board contributes to the protection of society by facilitating, as appropriate, the timely integration of offenders as law-abiding citizens.

The Mission establishes four core values:

- contribution to the attainment of a just, peaceful and safe society;
- respect for the inherent potential and dignity of all individuals and the equal rights of all members of society;
- belief that the contribution of qualified and motivated Board members and staff is essential to promoting the achievement of the Board's Mission; and,
- commitment to openness, integrity and accountability in the execution of our mandate.

As an agency within the public safety portfolio, the NPB strives constantly to advance the government's public safety priorities. The Board contributes to these priorities by making quality conditional release and pardon decisions that result in the safe reintegration of offenders in the community.

The NPB derives its decision-making authority from the Corrections and Conditional Release Act (CCRA), the Criminal Records Act (CRA), and the Criminal Code. The CCRA empowers the Board to make conditional release decisions for federal offenders and offenders in provinces and territories without their own parole boards. In addition, the Board has extensive legislated responsibilities related to openness and accountability, including information and assistance for victims of crime, observers at hearings, access to the NPB's decision registry, and delivery of a program of public information. The CRA authorizes the Board to grant or revoke pardons for convictions under federal acts or regulations. The Governor General or the Governor in Council approves the use of the RPM for those convicted of a federal offence, following investigations by the Board, and recommendations from the Minister of Public Safety.

The Board carries out its responsibilities in five regions (six offices) across the country and in the national office in Ottawa. Conditional release decisions are made by Board members in the regions. Board members are supported by staff who schedule hearings, provide information for decision-making, ensure that information for decision-making is shared with offenders, and communicate conditional release decisions to the offender, Correctional Service of Canada (CSC) representatives and others, as required. Regional staff also provide information to victims, make arrangements for observers at hearings, and manage requests for access to the Board's decision registry. At the national office, Board members make pardon decisions and decisions related to the appeal of conditional release decisions. Staff at the national office deliver the pardons and clemency program, develop conditional release and pardon policies, coordinate Board member training, and deliver a program of public information. As well, the national office provides leadership for strategic and operational planning, resource management, performance monitoring and an array of internal services.

Consistent with the provisions of the Acts that govern the NPB, Board members are independent in their decision-making responsibilities, free from interference of any type. As independent decision-makers, Board members are guided by legislation and policy and are responsible for:

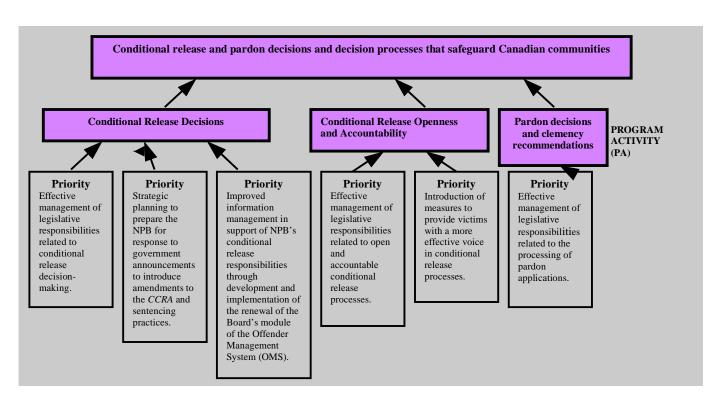

- reviewing all information for consideration in conditional release and pardon cases;
- conducting in-depth analysis of each case, requesting additional information, as necessary, to support quality decision-making;
- assessing the risk and other factors related to cases, voting independently on the disposition of each case, and providing sound, well-documented, written reasons for decisions; and,
- ensuring that hearings are conducted in accordance with the duty to act fairly, with respect for all procedural safeguards.

The Chairperson is a full-time member of the Board and its chief executive officer. The Chairperson directs NPB's program delivery in keeping with government plans and priorities, reports to Parliament through the Minister of Public Safety on the fulfilment of the Board's mandate and is accountable for the effectiveness and efficiency of NPB policy and operations. The Chairperson is assisted in these responsibilities by the Executive Vice-Chairperson, the Vice-Chairperson of the Appeal Division, and the Board's five regional vice-chairpersons. The Executive Director of the Board is its senior staff member and chief operating officer. The Executive Director, in support of the Chairperson, provides leadership for strategic and operational planning, resource management, performance measurement and administration.

Strategic Outcome and Program Activity Architecture (PAA)

The National Parole Board's Strategic Outcome and Program Activity Architecture (PAA), reflect the key aspects of the NPB's legislated responsibilities for conditional release and pardons, and represent the areas of accountability and performance in which the public and Parliamentarians most frequently express interest. In this context, the Board's strategic outcome is the cornerstone of its public accountability. The PAA includes a single strategic outcome and three operational program activities.

Risk Analysis

The NPB works in a challenging environment that demands effective support for government priorities, careful assessment of criminal justice issues and community concerns in a dynamic public context, and rigorous pursuit of innovation and improvement to meet heavy workload pressures with scarce resources. Public safety remains the Board's primary concern in all aspects of decision-making policy, training, and operations.

The Board delivers two legislatively based programs: conditional release; and, pardons and clemency. The NPB also manages a range of internal services that provide critical support for program delivery. The conditional release area is, by far, the most complex, accounting for about 90% of annual program expenditures. Program delivery is labour intensive, with salary costs amounting to close to 85% of yearly program costs. Most of the remaining expenditures cover essential operating costs such as travel to parole hearings. In this context, management of heavy and complex workloads within existing budgets, consistent with the principle of public safety, presents a constant challenge.

Conditional Release

Workloads related to conditional release decision-making are driven by factors beyond the NPB's control. Legislation governing the Board (e.g., the CCRA) is prescriptive, specifying when and how the Board must conduct its business (e.g., when to conduct parole hearings). In addition, workloads are driven by the actions of offenders, victims and the community. In concrete terms, the NPB must deal with high workload volumes, involving critical issues of public safety, in tight timeframes, amid intense public scrutiny. For example, in 2008-09, the Board completed 17,565 conditional release reviews for federal and provincial offenders.

The Board must also continue to deal with growing complexity in conditional release decision-making, as reflected in three important trends. The first is the more difficult federal offender population, characterized by longer criminal histories, greater prevalence of violence, more gang affiliations, more serious substance abuse problems and more serious mental health issues. The second involves the shift toward shorter federal prison sentences. A more difficult offender population with shorter sentences (and less time to benefit from programs) challenges the NPB's work to assess factors related to safe reintegration in the community. The third trend is the growing diversity in the offender population, as reflected in the continued over-representation of Aboriginal people and the growing numbers of offenders from diverse ethno-racial communities. This trend demands that the Board continue to develop policies, training and decision processes that enable it to collect and assess relevant information related to risk and safe community reintegration for groups of offenders with unique needs and circumstances. Decision processes such as Elder-assisted hearings for Aboriginal offenders exemplify the NPB's efforts in this area.

The openness and accountability provisions of the CCRA continue to present important challenges for the Board with respect to: sharing information with victims of crime; provision of information and assistance for those who wish to observe NPB hearings or gain access to the Board's registry of decisions; and delivery of a program of public information. Workloads in these areas have grown exponentially since the introduction of the CCRA in 1992. In 2008-09, the Board had more than 20,000 contacts with victims. As with conditional release decision-making, the need for quality program delivery in this area is critical, given its implications for public safety and public confidence in corrections and conditional release.

The government has announced extensive plans to tackle crime and strengthen community safety, including reform of sentencing, corrections and conditional release. The NPB must continue work to support those initiatives in an effective manner. The Board must manage the workload and cost implications of the provision of mandatory minimum penalties for gun crimes (Tackling Violent Crime Act). The Board must also support more stringent measures for dealing with Dangerous Offenders and offenders serving Long-term Supervision Orders as outlined in the Tackling Violent Crime Act. Proposals to amend the CCRA to introduce an "earned parole" approach would have a profound impact on the Board and, therefore, demand careful analysis and sound planning.

Pardons and Clemency

A drastic increase in the number of pardon applications has created a serious situation for the pardons program. Historically, the Board received 15,000 to 20,000 pardon applications every year. In the past three years, however, application volumes rose sharply, reaching 36,000 in 2008-09. Factors contributing to growth in annual volumes of pardon applications include:

- greater scrutiny by government, private and voluntary sectors of potential employees;
- perceptions by Canadians of the increased value of a pardon for employment, and travel;
- active advertising campaigns by private sector organizations that provide assistance applying for pardons; and

• the increasing number of people eligible to apply for a pardon - the current estimate is 1.5 million people, which grows by 60,000 annually.

Growth in applications resulted in a backlog of pardon applications. The Board worked to clear this backlog and put in place measures to create long-term sustainability for the pardon program. These measures are critical, given the expectation that pardon applications will continue to grow. Strategic Resource Management

The Board has been addressing, and must continue to address, the need for strategic management of human, financial, information and technology resources to support quality program delivery.

The Board's human resource challenge has two dimensions. The first involves Board members who are Governor-in-Council appointments. The CCRA specifies that the Board will comprise no more than 45 full-time members who are usually appointed for five years. The Act also provides for the appointment of part-time members to help manage conditional release decision-making workloads. Part-time members are usually appointed for three years. Each year, decision-making workloads require the use of significant numbers of part-time Board members (20 to 30 full-time equivalents).

Maintaining sufficient numbers of experienced Board members is a challenge because of the specified terms of appointment. The NPB must also deal with the reality that, following an initial orientation period of five weeks, newly appointed Board members still require three to six months of additional training and mentoring before they can manage the full scope of their decision-making responsibilities. In this context, the Board must ensure that it recruits sufficient numbers of qualified candidates for consideration for appointment as Board members, and provides effective training to ensure that Board members have the knowledge they need to apply NPB policies and assess risk in decision-making.

The Board faces an equally difficult challenge with respect to its staff. In the last year, a significant number of senior and experienced staff have retired and more will be able to retire shortly. Departures will erode corporate memory and diminish critical knowledge of the law, policy and operations. For the Board, whose members are appointed for specified periods, staff provide the continuity of knowledge and information essential for quality program delivery. For this reason, development of an effective human resource plan for dealing with staff turnover was essential. Timely access to relevant information provides the foundation for quality conditional release and pardon decision-making and ultimately for the Board's continuing contribution to public safety. In addition, the Board must deal with legislated responsibilities for sharing appropriate information with victims of crime, offenders, other criminal justice agencies, and the public. In this environment, strategic information management is crucial, requiring the Board to have in place the automated systems necessary to support effective collection, storage and sharing of information, as well as the policies and processes necessary to ensure effective information management. Progress in these areas will require the assistance of CSC, because CSC is the Board's information technology service provider. Effective management of this partnership for service delivery must continue to be a priority for the Board.

Strategic management of financial resources has also presented important challenges. The Board has faced complex and growing workload pressures in areas of legislated responsibility. In 2008-

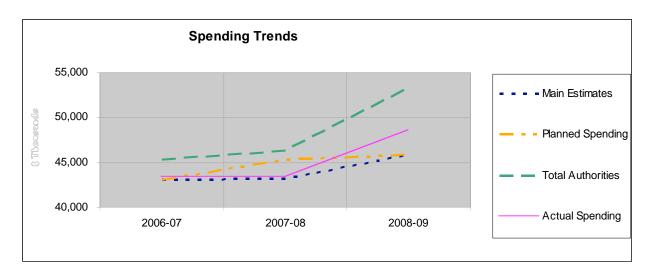

09, the Board also participated in the strategic review process. While this exercise presented a significant challenge to the Board given its limited resources, the NPB's report was cited as a best practice by Treasury Board. The Board must implement measures to reduce planned spending consistent with the strategic review, while ensuring that it retains the capacity to sustain quality in all aspects of program delivery.

Expenditure Profile

In 2008-09, the Board's total authorities, consisting of Main Estimates, subsequent to Supplementary Estimates funding, were $53.4M. This consisted of $47.9M of operating resources and $5.4M for the Employee Benefit Plan.

Actual expenditures were $43.1M <sup>8</sup> and resulted in a reported Public Accounts lapse of $4.8M. This lapse included $2.8M of special allotments that the Board could not spend, therefore resulting in a real lapse of $1.9M. The $1.9M lapse or approximately 3.6% of total authorities indicates that the Board was able to manage its resources successfully for 2008-09.

The Board applied its resources to the three following program areas: Conditional Release Decisions, Conditional Release Openness and Accountability and Pardon Decisions/Clemency Recommendations.<sup>9</sup>

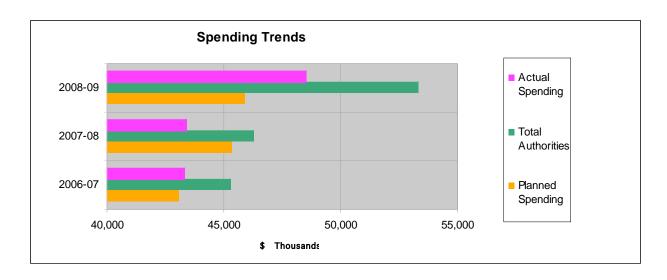

Resource increases in 2007-08 and 2008-09 are a result of funding received for: the National Accommodations Plan; the transfer of the BC provincial parole functions to the NPB; an increase the Board's capacity to render parole decisions due to an increased number of provincial offenders sentenced under the Mandatory Minimum Penalties for Serious Drug Offences; compensation for collective agreements; and to improve communications with victims.

SECTION II: ANALYSIS OF PROGRAM ACTIVITIES BY STRATEGIC OUTCOME

The NPB has one strategic outcome:

Strategic Outcome: Conditional release and pardon decisions and decision processes that safeguard Canadian communities

Program Activity by Strategic Outcome

The NPB program activities and priorities are designed to support continuous progress in achieving the strategic outcome. The following section describes the NPB's program activities and identifies the expected result, performance indicators and targets for each of them. This section also explains how the NPB plans on meeting the expected results and presents the financial and non-financial resources that will be dedicated to each program activity.

The section will contain a discussion of plans surrounding the following Program Activities:

- Program Activity 1: Conditional Release Decisions
- Program Activity 2: Conditional Release Openness and Accountability
- Program Activity 3: Pardon Decisions / Clemency Recommendations

Benefits for Canadians

The government has identified "safe and secure communities" as a key outcome area. Public safety is the Board's primary objective. Conditional release is based on the principle that gradual release to the community, in conjunction with effective programs and treatment, quality assessments of the risk of re-offending and effective community supervision enhances community safety. Information on post-warrant readmission on a federal sentence reinforces this theory, suggesting that the detailed process of case preparation and assessment used by the Board and CSC for parole decision-making is effective in identifying those offenders most likely to remain free from crime in the community.

Performance Analysis

Information on performance demonstrates that the Board achieved the priorities and commitments identified in its Plans and Priorities for 2008-09. In 2008-09, the Board completed 17,565 conditional release reviews for federal and provincial offenders.

Data continues to support that parole contributes to public safety. More than 93% of all parole releases do not result in a new offence, and 99% do not result in a new violent offence.

Information on re-offending after completion of sentence illustrates that 9 of 10 offenders who reach the end of their sentences on full parole do not return to a federal penitentiary.

The Board made progress on the development of a new automated system for managing and sharing conditional release information within the Board and with CSC. The Renewal Project is well underway, with the File Management portion in development while requirements are being finalized for the Case Management portion.

For more information, please access the Board's Performance Monitoring Reports at: http://www.npb-cnlc.gc.ca/rprts/rprt-eng.shtml.

Lessons Learned

In 2008-09, the NPB carried out a number of activities designed to support quality decision-making, including:

- presented findings of an evaluation of the Board's orientation and training program for Board members and created an advisory committee to advance initiatives and address priorities.
- implementation of new policy for the use of video-conferencing technology to facilitate Board member involvement in hearings.

Benefits for Canadians

This program activity is designed to ensure that the Board operates in an open and accountable manner, consistent with the provisions of the CCRA and that it shares information effectively in support of public safety. Work in this area recognizes that the NPB operates in a difficult environment in which timely sharing of accurate information is fundamental to effective partnership and public trust.

The CCRA requires the Board to provide information for victims of crime, allow observers at its hearings and provide access to its decisions through a registry of decisions.

Performance Analysis

The openness and accountability provisions of the CCRA continue to present important challenges for the Board with respect to: sharing information with victims of crime; provision of information and assistance for those who wish to observe NPB hearings or gain access to the Board's registry of decisions; and delivery of a program of public information. Workloads in these areas have grown exponentially since introduction of the CCRA in 1992. In 2008-09, for example, the Board had more than 20,000 contacts with victims. As with conditional release decision-making, the need for quality program delivery in this area is critical, given its implications for public safety and public confidence in corrections and conditional release. Intense public scrutiny and extensive media interest in this area make program effectiveness crucial.

Most of the 20,000 contacts were with victims of violence, such as sexual assault or the murder of a family member. The results of a joint NPB/CSC questionnaire of victims' services conducted in the summer of 2009 will be available shortly. A similar survey conducted with victims in 2003 found the majority were satisfied with the quality and timeliness of the information provided by NPB staff.

The Board had 1,904 observers at its hearings in 2008-09, reflecting a 62% increase over the last five years and in 2008-09, victims made 192 presentations at 112 hearings. Most of these were family members of victims of murder (47%) or manslaughter (15%). Most of the presentations (94%) were made in person, while the rest were on either audio or video tape, or by video or teleconference.

The CCRA permits access to specific decisions and to decisions for research purposes through the Board's registry of decisions. For more information, please see http://www.npb-cnlc.gc.ca/infocntr/factsh/registr-eng.shtml/.

In 2008-09, the Board released over 6,100 decisions from the registry. Victims were the most frequent requestors of decisions (approximately 52%), followed by the media (approximately 32%).

When an offender on conditional release is charged with a serious violent offence in the community, the NPB may conduct a National Joint Board of Investigation with CSC. One Board of Investigation was conducted in 2008-09.

Lessons Learned

The Board developed guidelines on the use of videoconferencing technology to enhance access by victims to NPB hearings and began training the regional offices on its use. Effective progress also requires that the NPB work in partnership with CSC to ensure that videoconferencing equipment is available in hearing rooms and in various sites in the community to support productive use of this technology.

Benefits for Canadians

A pardon is a formal attempt to remove the stigma of a criminal record for people found guilty of a federal offence and who, after satisfying their sentence and a specified waiting period, have shown themselves to be responsible citizens.

By providing quality pardon decisions and clemency recommendations, this program activity is designed to support safe and secure communities through rehabilitation and community reintegration.

The pardons program is an important part of the NPB's mandate. The benefits of the program include:

- ensuring careful consideration is given to issues of public safety;
- providing an opportunity for pardon recipients to contribute to their communities as lawabiding citizens;
- those who receive a pardon have increased opportunities for employment and housing;
- most individuals (over 96%) who receive a pardon remain crime free, demonstrating the value of a pardon as a long-term measure for community reintegration.

Performance Analysis

The Board used to receive 15,000 to 20,000 pardon applications per year; however in 2008-09 the number of applications rose to 36,000. The impact of this increase on workload is substantial, and led to a backlog of applications in 2007. To address this backlog, the Board shifted resources on a temporary basis from the Conditional Release program to the Pardons program. As well, an action plan was developed to enhance productivity in the short-term and to establish sustainability for the pardon program in the long-term. This plan calls for a wide range of improvements, including: policy refinement; technological advancements; process streamlining; creation of a team to eliminate the backlog of the applications; establishment of service standards for application processing; and increasing the user fee to align it with current operational and program realities.

The NPB charges a $50.00 user fee for the processing of pardon applications and has access to 70% of revenues collected. The RCMP has access to 30% of user fees collected. These fees do not represent the full cost of a pardon. The fee was set at $50.00 so as not to serve as an impediment for Canadians who wish to benefit from a pardon. In response to the growing need to process more pardons and to make the Pardon program sustainable, the Board has proposed an increase to the pardon fee and hopes to implement this change in 2009-10.

Lessons Learned

The Board recently established service standards for processing pardon applications. In conformity with s. 4 of the User Fees Act, the Board created these standards before proposing to increase its fee for a pardon application. The Board has attempted to meet these service standards over the last year; however, due to the backlog in the processing of pardon applications, the Board was only able to meet the new standards by shifting resources between the conditional release and the pardons program. This shift in funding is, however, unsustainable – thus the need for an increase in the fee for a pardon application.

Financial Highlights Chart

The figure below displays the allocation of NPB funding by program activity for 2008-09.

More than three-quarters (79%) of the NPB's funding in 2008-09 is allocated to Program Activity 1 (conditional release decisions), and 15% is allocated to Program Activity 2 (conditional release openness and accountability). In total, the Board's work relating to conditional release accounts for 94% of annual program expenditures. The remaining 6% is dedicated to pardon decisions/clemency recommendations.

SECTION IV: OTHER ITEMS OF INTEREST

Structure for Program Delivery

The Board carries-out its work through six offices across the country and the national office in Ottawa. The national office makes elemency recommendations, pardon decisions and develops related policies. It is also responsible for a range of activities related to conditional release, including investigations, appeal decisions, policy development, and Board member training. As well, the national office provides leadership for planning, resource management, communications, performance reporting and corporate services.

Conditional release decisions are made by Board members in the regions. Board members are supported by staff who schedule hearings, ensure that information for decision-making is received and shared with the offender, provide policy advice, and communicate conditional release decisions to the offender, CSC and others as required. Staff in regions also provide information for victims, make arrangements for observers at hearings, and manage requests for access to the Board's decision registry, and provide training for Board members.

Partnership for Program Delivery

Partnership is integral to effective NPB operations. As the Board's key partner, CSC provides information for NPB decision-making (internally generated and from external sources). If an offender is granted release by the Board, CSC supervises the offender in the community. Clearly, the Board shares accountability for "outcomes". When parolees succeed, "success" is the result of many players in the system, as well as the offender.

The RCMP also works with the Board in the processing of pardon applications. The RCMP provides the NPB with information on criminal histories, and periods of crime-free behaviour for pardon applicants. When the Board issues or grants a pardon, it notifies the RCMP which seals the pardoned record. In the case of pardon revocation, the Board and the RCMP share information to support NPB decision-making, and RCMP responsibilities for management of information within the Canadian Police Information Centre (CPIC).
