

Hello,

As a parent and wife of those suffering from severe nut allergies, travel always makes me extremely nervous; particularly air travel. I feel that so many environments with children eg school have easily banned nuts so why can't all airlines? Nuts are not a necessity and there are several other snack options available.

With the consequences being so serious, nuts should be banned from air travel and all planes should carry epi pens with all staff fully trained on their use.

Thank you
