

This may seem harsh but I believe it's required to make the point. How many of you want to sit beside that individual with autism or ODD (who may have aggressive behaviours - especially in high anxiety situations, like flying) because the airline will not allow a support person for their flight?!?! If you can't have empathy for those in need, perhaps you can see the more 'selfish' side?