

Thank you for your consideration for accessible transportation for those of us with food allergies. My family has many food allergies making it difficult to travel. The most important aspect of dealing with food allergies is the fact that staff are not trained well and do not know how to handle clients with allergies. We need to have special training done and consistent protocols in place for dealing with people with food allergies to keep everyone safe and all travel modes available for us.

I appreciate you looking at this very serious issue and look forward to change!

Regards,
Carol
