You may want to read this too - it's a reaction to Ezra Levant's article and chronicles some social media reaction to the bodyguard story as well.

Hi Sue and Mark,

Just flagging this Toronto Sun article in case you hear about it elsewhere:

http://www.torontosun.com/2013/01/28/suzukis-nature-when-he-visited-a-small-college-recently-he-asked-for-female-bodyguards

It was also mentioned on Talk 1010 CFRB this morning. As yet, I've had no calls or emails looking for comment.

Subject: This is the Suzuki Foundation response To: Chuck Thompson (2) cbc.ca>

Hi Chuck,

This is what the Foundation prepared (not sure if in answer to a request). DS's assistant forwarded it to me as an FYI.

Thank you for your message. David Suzuki receives numerous requests for paid public speaking engagements; however, they are not organized through the David Suzuki Foundation, but through his personal assistant.

We can, however, confirm that the allegations made by Ezra Levant and the + +Sun Media chain about Dr. Suzuki's speech at John Abbott College last October are untrue. During David Suzuki's visit to the campus, both male and female students accompanied him during a full day of activities. With regard to Dr. Suzuki's fee, it was in line with his full-day participation in what were important educational events for the college.

Also, the link below offers a good analysis:

As I mentioned, Abbott College also put out a statement, outlining how many people accompanied David.
