Message from the Principal Clerk of Committees

It is my pleasure to present the 2010-2011 Annual Report of the Senate Committees Directorate, describing the activities and expenditures of the directorate and the many committees to which it provides administrative, procedural and other support.

The 3rd Session of the 40th Parliament began on March 3, 2010 with the Speech from the Throne in the Senate Chamber. The next day, the Selection Committee reported its recommendations for committee membership, and committee organization meetings were held shortly thereafter.

Committees soon became active and activity levels remained high until dissolution which ended the session on March 26, 2011. The hours in committee and the number of witnesses who appeared to present their views were significantly higher than the 5-year average.

Committees also found new ways to reach out to Canadians. The Standing Committee on Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources became the first Canadian parliamentary committee to use Twitter to engage with Canadians about the country's energy future. The Committee on Aboriginal Peoples sought to reach out to citizens by placing a banner advertisement – the space at the top of a webpage – on the Aboriginal Peoples Television Network. The banner redirected online users to the 'enhanced news release' on the committee website and increased the odds that the report would be shared by users who could forward links via social media tools.

The Committees Directorate is proud to provide professional, non-partisan support to Senate committees to help them attain their objectives. We greatly appreciate the feedback we receive from committee chairs and deputy chairs which helps us to assess and improve our services. In addition, the directorate is pleased with the very positive feedback it receives through surveys given to witnesses following their appearance. The responses indicate a very high level of satisfaction, with 99% of witnesses rating the overall services of the Committees Directorate as 4 or 5 on a 5-point scale. These numbers, combined with responses indicating that 98% of witnesses considered their appearance to be useful, demonstrate that the directorate is providing high-quality support to a process that Canadians value.

Committee Activities

Committees account for much of the activity of the Senate. On average, over 50 bills are examined and 50 special studies are undertaken each year. Each committee is unique in subject matter and purpose. Some committees rarely examine legislation, while others focus almost entirely on bills. There are currently nineteen standing committees of the Senate. The size of committees, their general areas of study and the number of members required for quorum are set under Rule 86(1) of the Rules of the Senate.

^{*} All data contained in this report was extracted from the Journals of the Senate, the Proceedings of Senate Committees and the records of the Senate Finance Directorate.

Consulting Canadians and Others

Every year, a number of trips are undertaken to gather testimony at the local and regional levels. Committees hold formal public hearings in locations throughout Canada, and undertake more informal "fact-finding" trips both within Canada and abroad. Committee travel provides senators with the opportunity to better familiarize themselves with the issues they are studying and to obtain evidence and information that cannot be obtained in Ottawa.

When committees travel outside Canada to inquire into matters, the meetings are called fact-finding missions, which means they are not considered official proceedings and no transcripts are published. The information gathered, however, is still valid to the committee's inquiry and can be used in a report of the committee.

Parliamentary Internet

The Committees Directorate regularly reassesses its presence on the Parliamentary Internet site (www.parl.gc.ca) to ensure that it provides useful information and is user-friendly. We value the relevance of this medium to enhance the visibility of Senate committees.

All committee reports, press releases, and appropriate directorate documents are converted into HTML and/or PDF format and posted on the Internet. Information on the Internet about Senate committees, including the date, time and place of meetings, expected witnesses, radio frequencies and whether the meeting will be webcast and/or video-recorded for broadcasting on CPAC are updated on a regular basis. Key directorate documents such as the Annual Report, Fundamentals of Senate Committees and Guide to Participating in a Senate Committee Study are also available online.

Highlights of Special Study Reports

Standing Committee on Aboriginal Peoples

First Nations Elections: The Choice is Inherently Theirs (Third Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on May 12, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40- 217S)

The committee's May 2010 report entitled First Nations Elections: The Choice is Inherently Theirs examines issues relating to band council elections held pursuant to Indian Act provisions and regulations. The report suggests that the existing two-year term of office imposed on First Nations by the Indian Act is too short to provide political and economic stability, often creating deep divisions in communities. The report further notes that Indian Act election systems are often fraught with administrative difficulties and inconsistencies, resulting in frequent appeals.

The committee's report recommends that immediate steps be taken to create a First Nations Electoral and Appeals Commission to strengthen the electoral capacity for First Nations, as well as to provide for an efficient appeals process and to help develop effective and transparent practices. The report also calls for a firm commitment by the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development to assist First Nations who currently hold elections under the Indian Act to revert to community-based elections, a mechanism already in place. The report outlines the need for clear targets and timelines for the reversion to community-codes. It also recommends that funding be made available to those First Nations under the customary method of leadership selection to permit them to update their codes to be consistent with Canadian law and effective governance practices.

The Journey Ahead: Report on progress since the Government of Canada's apology to former students of Indian Residential Schools

(Seventh Report (final) tabled in the Senate on December 14, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40- 862S)

On June 11, 2008, Prime Minister Stephen Harper delivered in Parliament a Statement of Apology to former students of Indian Residential Schools. The Journey Ahead: Report on progress since the Government of Canada's apology to former students of Indian Residential Schools, issued by the committee in December 2010, surveys the perspectives of the national Aboriginal organizations and the Truth and Reconciliation Commission in respect of progress made on the path of reconciliation since the apology. The committee's report takes note of several observations made by witnesses in the context of the study, and contemplates revisiting this subject as the Truth and Reconciliation Commission continues to work toward reconciliation and the resolution of the legacy of Indian Residential Schools.

Special Committee on Anti-terrorism

Security, Freedom and the Complex Terrorist Threat: Positive Steps Ahead

(Third Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on March 23, 2011; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-962S)

In May 2010, the Special Senate Committee on Anti-terrorism began a special study on the changing threat environment in Canada. Its March 2011 interim report entitled Security, Freedom and the Complex Terrorist Threat: Positive Steps Ahead deals with the changing threat environment, the challenges associated with terrorist investigations and prosecutions and parliamentary oversight of national security. Two major concerns were highlighted in this report: the longstanding absence in Canada of appropriate and in-depth national security parliamentary oversight and the lack of a strong research basis specific to the transition from radicalization into violence.

The committee pointed out that Canada lags significantly behind its allies on the issue of parliamentary oversight of national security activities. Thus, the committee recommended that, consistent with practices in the United Kingdom, Australia, France, the Netherlands and the United States, the federal government should constitute, through legislation, a committee composed of members from both Chambers of Parliament, to execute parliamentary oversight of national security. The committee should report to the Prime Minister, who would make that report public within 60 days of receipt.

The committee also pointed out the importance of understanding how radicalization of extremists leads to violence. Thus, the committee recommended that, given the lack of a strong research basis specific to the transition from radicalization into violence in Canada, the federal government provide support, including financial support, to conduct such research, in order to better understand and prevent violent extremism.

Standing Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce

Canadians Saving for their Future: A Secure Retirement (Third Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on June 10, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-389S)

Canadians Saving for their Future: A Secure Retirement (Fourth Report (final) tabled in the Senate on October 19, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-756S)

In 2010, in response to a request by the Minister of Finance, the committee studied retirement saving in Canada, with a particular focus on registered retirement savings plans (RRSPs) and Tax-Free Savings Accounts (TFSAs). While the June 2010 interim report summarized the testimony received by the committee, the October 2010 final report repeated the summary of testimony and recommended a number of ways in which tax-assisted saving, including for retirement, might be increased in Canada. In addition to suggesting changes to RRSPs, TFSAs and registered retirement income funds, the committee recommended the creation of a retirement savings mechanism that would involve auto-enrolment with the opportunity to opt out, the ability to make contributions with unused TFSA and RRSP contribution room, and a variety of funds with different investment objectives, fees and investment instruments. Lastly, the committee recommended that the Financial Consumer Agency of Canada have an oversight and public education role with regard to real or perceived conflicts of interest by financial managers and investment industry fees.

Ten-Year Statutory Review of the Business Development Bank of Canada (Seventh Report (final) tabled in the Senate on December 15, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-867S)

In the fall of 2010, the committee conducted a ten-year legislative review of the Business Development Bank of Canada Act. The committee commented favourably on the Business Development Bank of Canada's work during the recent global financial and economic crisis as well as its efforts in providing financing to small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs). In its report, the committee affirmed that the Business Development Bank of Canada (BDC) should continue to provide assistance and financial services to SMEs in a manner that complements the services available from Canada's financial institutions. As well, the committee supported the BDC's request to expand its range of financial and non-financial tools, including the ability to grant loans to Canadian SMEs investing abroad, and made recommendations to modernize the BDC's governance structure.

Standing Committee on Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources

Globe 2010 Conference: Beyond the Science

(Fourth Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on May 27, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-238S)

Nine members of the committee attended the Globe 2010 conference in Vancouver, March 24-26, 2010. GLOBE is a biennial international conference and trade fair on the business of the environment. Over 10,000 participants representing corporate executives, government decision makers and leaders of the environmental industry from over 80 countries converged at GLOBE 2010. The report summarized what the delegation heard at GLOBE 2010.

Attention Canada! Preparing for our Energy Future

(Seventh Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on June 29, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-470S)

On June 4th, 2009, the committee undertook a comprehensive study to examine and report on the current and future state of Canada's energy system. The call to participate in a national energy dialogue came in the committee's interim report entitled Attention Canada! Preparing for our Energy Future. The report represented the culmination of nearly nine months of study and research including testimony from Canada's leading energy thinkers, research institutions and other stakeholders. The committee's message was clear: there is urgent need for a national discussion on energy. Canada requires a comprehensive Canadian Sustainable Energy Strategy now. The report recognized:

- the importance of addressing climate change through carbon pricing and the need to improve the sustainable supply of existing and emerging sources of energy;
- the importance of improving the ways we use and conserve energy as a means to address our energy and environmental challenges while also improving economic productivity;
- the important economic relationship between Canada and the United States and the need to harmonize where practical our energy policy objectives for the benefit of both countries;
- Canada's electricity system, including the potential for further provincial electricity market integration;
- items related to energy security, particularly with regard to maintaining and expanding Canada's energy export markets;
- the need to innovate and develop technologies that are in line with Canada's competitive advantage as a key issue in meeting Canada's economic, energy and environmental objectives.
- issues such as balancing the need for building new energy infrastructure while also addressing the environmental impact it may have on nearby communities; and
- the need to implement effective and smarter regulatory frameworks.

The report was a preliminary outline of the key issues to be considered in developing a Canadian sustainable energy policy framework for the future.

Facts Do Not Justify Banning Canada's Current Offshore Drilling Operations: A Senate Review In the Wake of BP's Deepwater Horizon Incident

(Eighth Report (interim) deposited with the Clerk of the Senate on August 18, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-665S)

As a consequence of concerns expressed by Canadians following the disastrous BP incident in the spring of 2010 which spewed millions of barrels of crude oil into the Gulf of Mexico, the committee conducted six weeks of hearings to determine the actual status of Canada's offshore drilling operations. The goal was to establish whether there is an imminent risk to Canada's environment from subsea oil and gas exploration activities off Canada's three coasts (Atlantic, Pacific and Arctic). This special study included a review of Canada's federal and provincial regulatory regimes governing Canada's offshore oil and gas exploration and development industry. In keeping with its commitment to establish a framework for a more efficient energy system for future generations, the committee made six recommendations in its report to stimulate discussion in order to find the best path forward to a secure, competitive and sustainable energy future. These recommendations included:

- exploring in greater detail the structure and role of the offshore petroleum boards to determine whether there may be in fact a material conflict between regulatory roles;
- greater collaboration between all those responsible for responding to an oil spill in developing, preparing and practicing in advance of an event;
- that all offshore operators be required to organize Tier Three spill response tabletop drills at regular intervals; and
- a comprehensive review of the issue of liability, including whether the thresholds should be adjusted to reflect current economic realities.

Standing Committee on Fisheries and Oceans

Controlling Canada's Arctic Waters: Role of the Canadian Coast Guard

(Second Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on April 15, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-146S)

The committee republished the report entitled Controlling Canadian Arctic Waters: Role of the Canadian Coast Guard in April 2010 in order to request a response from the Government on its recommendations.

The Management of Fisheries and Oceans in Canada's Western Arctic

(Fourth Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on May 26, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-236S)

The vast area under consideration in this report on fisheries includes the northwestern part of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans' Central and Arctic Region – the largest of the Department's six administrative regions, covering almost two thirds of Canada. The committee referred to information collected in public hearings and fact-finding missions in the previous session. The report made fourteen recommendations on the commercial char fishery, the Freshwater Fish Marketing Corporation, the Great Slave Lake commercial fishery, the research initiatives conducted by the Department of Fisheries and Oceans in the region, the monitoring in the Mackenzie Valley watershed, development in marine areas, and, Canada–US bilateral issues. The report called on the Department of Fisheries and Oceans for enhanced stewardship in the management of fisheries and emerging development opportunities in this region.

Seeing the Light: Report on Staffed Lighthouses in Newfoundland and Labrador and British Columbia

(Sixth Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on December 20, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-455S)

In this first report on Canada's lighthouses, the committee focused its attention on the five following issues: 1) the role of Canadian lighthouses in the provision of safe and efficient marine transportation; 2) the Canadian Coast Guard's most recent plan to automate Canada's remaining staffed light stations in British Columbia and Newfoundland and Labrador; 3) the current role of Canada's lightkeepers, including the duties they have taken on, both formally or informally, in addition to their regular function; 4) the impact of electronic aids to navigation on the role of lightkeepers, including those persons stationed at fully automated sites; and, 5) the level of service and reliability of automated aids to navigation, compared with traditional aids to navigation (e.g., staffed lightstations). After meeting with hundreds of individuals on this matter, in public hearings in Ottawa and in fact-finding meetings in Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Labrador and British Columbia, the committee concluded that staffed lightstations and lightkeepers play a key role in public safety, and that any cost savings realized from destaffing lighthouses would come at a very high price – that is the risk of loss of life. For this reason, the committee could not support the Coast Guard's 2009 destaffing plan. In its report, the committee made five recommendations and called on the Coast Guard to view each lightstation as unique and to evaluate the needs of each site individually, on a station-by-station basis.

Report on the Implementation of the Heritage Lighthouse Protection Act

(Seventh Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on March 24, 2011; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-968S)

In this second report on Canada's lighthouses, the committee focused its attention on the preservation of heritage lighthouses under the Heritage Lighthouse Protection Act (HLPA), which came into force at the end of May 2010, and the role of lighthouses in tourism, other economic activities, and community life in general. In its consultations, the committee heard many public expressions of interest and support regarding the preservation of lighthouses. It also heard concerns regarding the implementation of the Act. The committee made ten recommendations in this report calling for the preservation and proper maintenance of lighthouses, for a funding strategy that would assist local groups and communities in their preservation efforts and for supplementary measures that could assist in the implementation of the HLPA.

Standing Committee on Foreign Affairs and International Trade

A Workplan for Canada in the New Global Economy

(Seventh Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on June 28, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-469S)

This report was tabled in June 2010. After nearly three years, 90 witnesses, 45 hearings, and two fact-finding missions, the committee concluded in this report that the emergence of China, India and Russia holds significant domestic, bilateral, and global implications for Canada and for its future commercial prosperity. As a result, for the sake of Canadian companies specifically and Canadians more generally, the committee recommended that the Government of Canada formulate a set of policies that would better mitigate the associated challenges and realise potential benefits in order to enhance Canada's commercial relations with these three economies.

Seizing Opportunities for Canadians: India's Growth and Canada's Future Prosperity

(Eighth Report (final) tabled in the Senate on December 14, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-864S)

The committee began its study on the rise of China, India and Russia in the new global economy and the implications for Canadian policy in November 2007. In concluding its study, it believed that any effort to deepen Canadian commercial engagement with China, India and Russia will benefit from focus, persistence and consistency on the part of the Government of Canada. In other words, this goal can be achieved notwithstanding the relative size of the Canadian economy if the government's resources are applied strategically.

They also concluded that China, India and Russia need to be treated individually. Each is experiencing the transformation towards higher levels of economic growth from different starting points and in different ways. It follows that their opportunities, challenges and risks will reflect the specific circumstances of each, and policies crafted in response will need to do the same. For Canada's future prosperity and the realisation of mutual advantages, the Government of Canada should strengthen its bilateral trade and investment relations with China, India and Russia and formulate policies that better mitigate the associated challenges and realise potential mutual benefits of these emerging economies. The report also noted that there are many strategic reasons for Canada to focus on India and offered several recommendations in this respect.

Standing Committee on Human Rights

Reflecting the Changing Face of Canada: Employment Equity in the Federal Public Service (Second Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on June 15, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-405S)

On June 15, 2010, the Standing Senate Committee on Human Rights tabled its report, Reflecting the Changing Face of Canada: Employment Equity in the Federal Public Service. Since 2004, the committee had been tracking the progress made by the federal government in implementing the Employment Equity Act and achieving representation rates for certain groups within the federal public service that are equivalent to their availability in the Canadian workforce. The four groups designated by the Act are women, Aboriginal peoples, persons with disabilities and visible minorities.

The committee concluded that while the federal public service appeared to be meeting the Act's objectives for women, Aboriginal peoples and persons with disabilities, it is not doing so for visible minorities. It therefore recommended that the Government focus on concrete initiatives in order to achieve its employment equity goals with respect to this group. These would include implementing an appropriate communication strategy, developing means to seek accountability from managers in enforcing Employment Equity Act standards, assembling better data and making it publicly available, and undertaking further study of certain factors affecting the low representation rates for members of visible minority groups.

Canada and the United Nations Human Rights Council: Charting a New Course (Fourth Papert (interim) tabled in the Senate on June 22, 2010:

(Fourth Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on June 22, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-464S)

On June 22, 2010, the Standing Senate Committee on Human Rights tabled its fourth report in relation to the United Nations Human Rights Council (UNHRC) entitled Canada and the United Nations Human Rights Council: Charting a New Course. The report marked the conclusion of a long term study by the committee of the development of the Council since its inception in 2006, which had produced three previous reports. The report also examined Canada's first review of its human rights record under the Universal Periodic Review (UPR) mechanism before the Council.

The committee recommended that the Government of Canada develop new strategies for stronger human rights promotion at the UNHRC and to enhance Canada's leadership role in international human rights. In keeping with its previous reports, the committee also recommended that a new policy framework be developed for the signature, ratification and implementation of human rights treaties that would, among other things, include enhancing the role of Parliament in the process. Finally, having found that the procedures undertaken in preparation for Canada's first UPR lacked clarity and transparency, the committee recommended that the Government prepare and publicly announce a plan for the next UPR that would establish broad and meaningful engagement with relevant stakeholders, parliamentarians and the Canadian public.

Women, Peace and Security: Canada Moves Forward to Increase Women's Engagement

(Fifth Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on November 18, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-821S)

From September 2009 to April 2010, the Standing Senate Committee on Human Rights conducted a study of United Nations Security Council (UNSC) resolution 1325 on women, peace and security, which was adopted unanimously by the Council in October 2000. The committee focused its study on the implementation of the resolution by the UN and, in particular, in Canada. A report was tabled by the committee in the Senate November 18, 2010.

The report focused on two main areas: the role of women in situations of conflict and as agents of conflict resolution and peacebuilding; and sexual violence against women and girls during war. It contained 26 recommendations, including the need for clear indicators and timelines for the government's national action plan on the UNSC resolution, support for women to be involved in peace processes, inclusion of women in Canadian peace missions, gender sensitive training for Canadians involved in international peace and security sector missions, and targeted international development support.

Training in Afghanistan: Include Women

(Seventh Report (final) tabled in the Senate on December 15, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-868S)

During the fall of 2010, the Standing Senate Committee on Human Rights studied the situation of women in Afghanistan. As a follow up to its November 2010 report, Women, Peace and Security: Canada Moves Forward to Increase Women's Engagement, the committee sought to identify key areas where Canada could make a meaningful difference and work to implement United Nations Security Council resolution 1325 on women, peace and security. The committee tabled a report of its findings and recommendations on December 15, 2010.

The report recommended that Canada make the advancement of women's rights one of its top five priorities in Afghanistan. In addition, recommendations were made in five important sectors that were the focus of committee study: reconciliation, security, justice, education and development. Education and training are identified as crucial areas of focus at all levels for Afghan women and girls, for Afghan security and police forces and for Canadian forces on the ground in the country.

The committee also expressed serious concern about the risk to women's rights in future peace negotiations. It therefore encouraged the Canadian government to use all the tools and leverage at its disposal to preserve existing women's rights in Afghanistan, while also laying the groundwork for the sustainable enhancement and enforcement of these rights. In adopting this approach, the committee argued that Canada and NATO would solidify the chances of success for their objectives in that country, given that women's meaningful participation in society is an integral component of good governance and sustainable economic and social development.

Standing Committee on National Finance

The Costs and Benefits of Canada's One-Cent Coin to Canadian Tax Payers and the Overall Economy

(Eighth Report (final) tabled in the Senate on December 14, 2010 Sessional Paper No. 3/40- 863)

In December 2010, after hearing from government officials, representatives from other countries that have dealt with similar issues, retailers, bankers, consumer groups, charitable institutions, collectors and independent economists, the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance tabled its final report, The Costs and Benefits of Canada's One-Cent Coin to Canadian Taxpayers and the Overall Canadian Economy.

In the report, the committee recognized that an appropriate and efficient currency system is essential to the smooth functioning of the marketplace. The report is opportune given that more than a century of inflation has both eroded the value and utility of Canada's one-cent coin and escalated the costs associated with its production and use. Furthermore, the advent and rapidly increasing prevalence of electronic payment methods in recent decades has further undermined the viability of the one-cent coin as currency.

The eight recommendations presented in the report flow from the committee's conclusion that removing the one-cent coin from circulation would reduce costs to taxpayers, increase the productivity of the retail and service sectors of the Canadian economy, and streamline the vital operations of charitable organizations. The committee believes that the one-cent coin is simply defunct and its removal from circulation is long overdue. However, the committee is of the opinion that removing the one-cent coin from circulation should be done in a consultative and deliberate manner, with due regard for the interests of all stakeholders, including taxpayers, provincial and territorial governments, businesses, consumers, charities and collectors.

Standing Committee on National Security and Defence

Where we go from here: Canada's Mission in Afghanistan

(Fourth Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on June 22, 2010 Sessional Paper No. 3/40- 463S)

Given the importance of Canada's contribution to NATO's mission and to Afghanistan's future, and in light of the sacrifices Canadians have made, the Standing Senate Committee on National Security and Defence decided to study the role of the Canadian Forces in Afghanistan.

Following a series of hearings, the committee then tabled a short interim report, looking first at why Canadian Forces are in Afghanistan, what they have been doing there, what they have achieved; and then at factors that will shape the mission into the future, and at whether the Canadian Forces should continue to play a role in Afghanistan beyond 2011.

Based upon the evidence and testimony it heard, the committee concluded that Canada's important and highly-valued contribution to the development of the leadership, training and mentoring of the Afghan National Army and the Afghan National Police must continue beyond 2011, and that Parliament should, at its earliest opportunity, give careful consideration to the question of the role of the Canadian Forces in Afghanistan after 2011.

Sovereignty & Security in Canada's Arctic

(Seventh Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on March 22, 2011 Sessional Paper No. 3/40- 957S)

Arctic nations are thinking about and preparing for the future. That preparation includes increasing their military presence and capabilities in their respective Arctic zones. In recognition of these efforts and within the context of its mandate to study the national security and defence policies of Canada, the Standing Senate Committee on National Security and Defence chose to undertake an interim report about sovereignty and security in Canada's Arctic.

In this interim report, the committee examined the differences between the concepts of "sovereignty" and "security" and recommended the necessary steps that Canada should take to improve its presence in the Arctic.

While the committee made a series of recommendations as to how Canada's presence in the far North could be improved, this interim report was not intended to be an exhaustive in nature and the committee also listed a number of areas which it may choose to look into in the future.

Standing Committee on Official Languages

Implementation of Part VII of the Official Languages Act: We can still do better

(Third Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on June 17, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40- 451S)

In June 2010, the committee published a report on the implementation of Part VII of the Official Languages Act. The study had five objectives: (1) take stock of the progress made and new initiatives taken by federal institutions to support the development of official language minority communities and the promotion of linguistic duality; (2) assess how changes to Part VII of the Act have affected official language minority communities; (3) assess the effectiveness of coordination mechanisms established by the federal government to ensure implementation of Part VII; (4) identify best practices and areas in need of improvement; and (5) examine the federal government's process to define "positive measures" and determine official language minority communities' involvement in that process. The committee concluded that there is still work to be done to ensure the full implementation of Part VII of the Act, and it made 10 recommendations to promote a coherent and complete implementation of the Official Languages Act.

The Vitality of Quebec's English-Speaking Communities: From Myth to Reality

(Fourth Report (interim) tabled in the Senate on March 9, 2011; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-942S)

In March 2011, the committee published a report on English-speaking minority communities. It was the first time in the history of the committee, and of any parliamentary committee on official languages, that an entire study has been devoted exclusively to the English-speaking minority. The committee set three objectives for the study: (1) provide an overview of the situation of English-speaking communities in Quebec by examining various aspects affecting their development (e.g., community development, education, youth, arts and culture, health); (2) define the issues specific to English-speaking communities in Quebec and identify corrective measures deemed necessary for their development; and (3) make recommendations to the federal government to support the development and enhance the vitality of English-speaking minority communities. Throughout its report, the committee aimed both to dispel certain widely held myths regarding Quebec's English-speaking population and to highlight its success stories. It made 16 recommendations to draw the federal government's attention and interest to the concerns of the English-speaking minority and to the measures to be taken. The committee reminded the federal government of its responsibility under the Official Languages Act to enhance the vitality and support the development of both official language communities in Canada.

Standing Committee on Social Affairs, Science and Technology

Canada's Response to the 2009 H1N1 Pandemic

(Fifteenth Report (final) deposited with the Clerk of the Senate on December 29, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/ 40-896)

In June 2010, the committee was asked by the Minister of Health to undertake a study into Canada's response to the recent H1N1 influenza pandemic. The committee heard testimony from numerous witnesses over the course of ten sessions and, in December 2010, tabled its final report entitled: Canada's Response to the 2009 H1N1 Influenza Pandemic. This report recognizes the good work done by all those involved from the federal/provincial/territorial governments, to healthcare professionals, to front line and first responders at the municipal and regional level. However, the report makes 18 recommendations for further improvement including; renewed funding for pandemic preparedness planning, improved testing of Canada's pandemic plan, improved communication between the federal and provincial/territorial governments to ensure harmonized messaging, the accelerated development and implementation of agreements between jurisdictions, improved surveillance and data collection, enhanced public awareness campaigns and, increased use of electronic resources and use of social media.

Standing Committee on Transport and Communications

Plan for a Digital Canada.ca

(Fourth Report (final) tabled in the Senate on June 16, 2010; Sessional Paper No. 3/40-439S)

Canada's poor performance relative to other developed countries in wireless communication provided the impetus for the study. Prices were relatively high, penetration was relatively low and there were lags in Canadian access to some devices, such as the iPhone. After the committee began its study, the wireless sector in Canada became more competitive, and the members decided to broaden the study to examine Canada's overall digital society, rather than only one part of it.

The report, which was tabled in June 2010, contains 18 recommendations to help Canada develop an inclusive digital society that would allow all Canadians to access basic digital services (health, education or other online services, whether provided by the public sector or private sector). The report recommends that the government appoint a dedicated Minister for Digital Policy who would receive an annual report from each government department outlining: (a) its progress in making its programs more accessible and easier to use over the Internet; (b) its digital goals for the coming year; and (c) any special Information Technology needs or concerns. Other recommendations dealt with the efficient management of spectrum and with the continued promotion of competition in the wireless sector.

Throughout the report the recommended focus for government policy was on universal broadband access for Canadians, rather than on a high-speed target or cutting-edge technology that would be available only for some Canadians.

Part II - Committee Profiles 2010-2011

Standing Committee on Aboriginal Peoples

A. General Information

In the fiscal year 2010-2011, the committee received five orders of reference, three for special studies and two for legislation. The committee spent the majority of its time carrying out work on its global order of reference from the previous fiscal year, when it had received an order of reference to examine and report on the federal government's constitutional, treaty, political and legal responsibilities to First Nations, Inuit and Métis peoples, and on other matters generally relating to the Aboriginal Peoples of Canada.

Pursuant to this broad order of reference, the committee focused on a study of First Nations education reform. In 2010-2011, the committee held 20 meetings and heard 57 witnesses in the course of this study. While most witnesses were heard in Ottawa, several members of the committee travelled to Saskatchewan, Alberta, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia to gather evidence.

Also pursuant to the global order of reference, the committee tabled a report on the issue of elections held under the provisions of the Indian Act. In the previous fiscal year, the committee had held 17 meetings and heard 87 witnesses in the course of its study. These hearings culminated in the third report of the committee, tabled May 2010, and entitled First Nations Elections: The Choice is Inherently Theirs. On October 20, 2010, the Government Response to this report was referred to the committee, but was not studied prior to the end of the fiscal year.

The committee undertook an additional brief study after an order of reference was received on June 2, 2010, authorizing the committee to "examine the progress made on commitments endorsed by Parliamentarians of both Chambers since the Government's apology to former students of Indian Residential Schools." During the course of this study, five meetings were held and ten witnesses were heard. The study resulted in the seventh report of the committee entitled The Journey Ahead: Report on progress since the Government of Canada's apology to former students of Indian Residential Schools. It was tabled in the Senate on December 14, 2010.

On the legislative front, Bill C-24, An Act to amend the First Nations Commercial and Industrial Development Act, was reported without amendment on June 22, 2010, having been referred to the committee on June 17, 2010. On December 14, 2010, the committee received an order of reference to examine Bill S-11, An Act respecting the safety of drinking water on first nations lands. The committee held 9 meetings and heard from 47 witnesses, but the fiscal year ended prior to the bill being reported.

Standing Committee on Agriculture and Forestry

A. General Information

During the 2010-2011 fiscal year, the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry continued its mandate to examine and report on the current state and future of the forestry sector in Canada. The committee had tabled an interim report in December 2009 entitled The Canadian Forest Sector: Past, Present, Future. The report had proposed several themes for the continuation of the study.

The committee explored the proposed themes more deeply during 2010 with hearings in Ottawa and by conducting three fact-finding missions in the fall of 2010: the first one in British Columbia with visits organized in Vancouver, Williams Lake and Penticton/Kelowna; the second one to Timmins, Ontario, and Chibougamau, Quebec; and the third mission in the National Capital region with visits in Thurso and Lachute. The committee was studying a draft final report when dissolution occurred.

Standing Committee of Conflict of Interest for Senators

A. General Information

The Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators was created under the Rules of the Senate to be responsible for all matters relating to the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators adopted in 2005, and to exercise general direction over the Senate Ethics Officer. An amended Code was adopted by the Senate in May 2008. The committee's responsibilities are detailed in the Code.

The membership of the committee is determined by a process that differs from that of all other committees. In accordance with the provisions of the Code, two members are elected by secret ballot in the respective caucuses of the Government and Opposition parties. A fifth member is then chosen by these four members. The chair of the committee must be chosen by at least four members of the committee.

Standing Committee on Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources

A. General Information

The committee deals with matters relating to energy, the environment and natural resources generally, including: mining and natural resources, other than fisheries and forestry; pipelines, transmission lines and energy transportation; environmental affairs; and other energy-related matters.

On March 11, 2010, the Senate once again authorized the committee to examine and report on the current state and future of Canada's energy sector (including alternative energy). The committee continued its study, consulting Canada's leading energy thinkers, research institutions, industries, energy groups, federal, provincial and territorial governments and other stakeholders. The committee released its interim report Attention Canada! Preparing for our Energy Future in June 2010.

As a consequence of concerns expressed by Canadians following the disastrous BP incident in the spring of 2010 which spewed millions of barrels of crude oil into the Gulf of Mexico, the committee conducted six weeks of hearings to determine the actual status of Canada's offshore drilling operations. The report, entitled Facts Do Not Justify Banning Canada's Current Offshore Drilling Operations: A Senate Review In the Wake of BP's Deepwater Horizon Incident, was tabled with the Clerk of the Senate in August 2010.

The committee embarked on the second phase of its energy sector study in September 2010, using its interim report as a starting point for discussion, and invited government authorities, experts and stakeholders in specific energy and related sectors to explore key energy themes with the goal of moving towards a broadly based sustainable energy strategy for Canada.

On October 26, 2010, to facilitate a conversation with Canadians about developing a Canadian clean energy strategy, the committee launched a website dedicated to its study: www.canadianenergyfuture.ca. In addition to the website, the committee became the first Canadian parliamentary committee to use the social media tool Twitter (@SCEENR_SAYS) as a method to better engage with Canadians about Canada's energy future. The feedback for both initiatives has been extremely positive.

On November 18, 2010, committee members and staff travelled to Atomic Energy of Canada Limited's (AECL) Chalk River Laboratories, located along the bank of the Ottawa River, to see firsthand the exciting research being done at Chalk River, and to discuss and exchange ideas concerning the role nuclear energy could play in Canada's energy future.

On November 25-26, 2010, committee members and staff visited several Ontario nuclear facilities as part of the committee's ongoing study on Canada's energy future. Fact-finding activities took the delegation to Cameco (Port Hope, ON), Darlington Nuclear Generation Station (Clarington, ON), and Bruce Power Nuclear Station (Tiverton, ON).

The committee recognized that travelling to various regions of the country would provide senators, as part of their ongoing study examining the current and future state of Canada's energy systems, with first-hand perspectives on regional energy issues, complementing the knowledge gained during the Ottawa-based hearings. The committee conducted fact-finding activities and held public hearings in Montreal on February 7-8, 2011. From February 28 to March 3, 2011, the committee held public hearings in all the Atlantic Provinces. In addition to gaining a better understanding of regional issues, committee members heard from witnesses on a variety of topics, including:

- the links between energy and economic and regional development, including maintaining competitiveness, improving energy efficiency, resource development, value-added and job creation:
- sustainable development and the social license to build and operate energy projects; and
- areas of pan-Canadian collaboration on energy and collaborative approaches to intergovernmental engagement

The committee examined one order and one bill during the 2010-2011 fiscal year:

- Order Amending Schedule 2 to the Canada National Marine Conservation Areas Act, together with the Report to Parliament entitled Gwaii Haanas National Marine Conservation Area Reserve and Haida Heritage Site, tabled in the Senate on Tuesday, June 8, 2010, pursuant to the Canada National Marine Conservation Areas Act, S.C. 2002, c. 18, sbs. 7(1). The committee considered the same and reported to the Senate on June 9, 2010 that it did not disapprove the Order.
- Bill S-210, An Act to amend the Federal Sustainable Development Act and the Auditor General Act (involvement of Parliament). The committee reported the bill to the Senate, without amendment on April 22, 2010.

Bill S-225, An Act respecting the reorganization and privatization of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, was referred to the committee by the Senate on March 8, 2011. The committee had not held any meetings on this bill by the time the 40th Parliament, 3rd session was dissolved on March 26, 2011.

Standing Committee on Fisheries and Oceans

A. General Information

At the beginning of this fiscal year, the committee continued to study Canada's Western Arctic with a focus on the role of the Canadian Coast Guard and the management of fisheries and oceans in this region. The committee had accomplished work in the previous session and republished a report in April 2010 and referred to information collected during the previous session to publish a second report on the subject in May of the same year.

In March 2010, at the request of the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, the committee agreed to study Canada's lighthouses and the services provided by lightkeepers. It also decided to broaden the scope of its study to include the implementation of the Heritage Lighthouse Protection Act (HLPA), which was due to enter into force at the end of May 2010. The committee engaged lightkeepers and stakeholders, including the recreational boating community, commercial shippers and fishers (and their associations), business and community interests, and Canadian citizens at large by holding hearings in Ottawa and fact-finding missions in Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Labrador and British Columbia. The committee published two reports on the subject, one in December 2010 and the other in March 2011.

Standing Committee on Foreign Affairs and International Trade

A. General Information

According to the Rules of the Senate, the Standing Committee on Foreign Affairs deals with matters relating to foreign relations generally, including: treaties and international agreements; external trade; foreign aid; defence and territorial and offshore matters.

China, India, Russia

On March 4, 2008, February 24, 2009 and again on March 16, 2010, the committee received a mandate to study the rise of China, India and Russia in the global economy and the implications for Canadian policy. The main objective of this study was to better understand the high levels of economic growth of these countries in order to formulate concrete recommendations on Canada's policy response. As part of this study, the committee travelled to India in September of 2010. During this fact-finding mission, members of the committee met with business leaders and government officials. The final report on this study was tabled in December 2010.

Brazil

In November 2010, the committee began a study on the political and economic developments in Brazil and the implications for Canadian policy and interests in the region, and other related matters.

In addition to these special studies, during this fiscal year the committee also dealt with Bill C-2, An Act to implement the Free Trade Agreement between Canada and the Republic of Colombia, the Agreement on the Environment between Canada and the Republic of Colombia and the Agreement on Labour Cooperation between Canada and the Republic of Colombia. They also dealt with Bill C-61, An Act to provide for the taking of restrictive measures in respect of the property of officials and former officials of foreign states and of their family members.

Standing Committee on Human Rights

A. General Information

In March 2010, the committee sought and received a number of orders of reference from the Senate to continue previous studies including: 1) monitoring the implementation of the committee's report A Hard Bed to Lie In: Matrimonial Real Property on Reserve, tabled in the Senate November 4, 2003; 2) monitoring issues relating to human rights and, inter alia, to review the machinery of government dealing with Canada's international and national human rights obligations; 3) examining issues of discrimination in the hiring and promotion practices of the Federal Public Service, to study the extent to which targets to achieve employment equity are being met, and to examine labour market outcomes for minority groups in the private sector; 4) monitoring the implementation of recommendations contained in the committee's report entitled Children: The Silenced Citizens: Effective Implementation of Canada's International Obligations with Respect to the Rights of Children, tabled in the Senate on April 25, 2007; and 5) examining the issue of the sexual exploitation of children in Canada, with a particular emphasis on understanding the scope and prevalence of the problem of the sexual exploitation of children across the country and in particularly affected communities.

Further to the order of reference to study issues related to human rights and, inter alia, the machinery of government dealing with Canada's international and national human rights obligations, the committee focused their attention on three issues in 2010-2011.

- The first dealt with the committee's ongoing interest in the work of the United Nations Human Rights Council. In June 2010, the committee tabled an extensive report that marked the conclusion of a long term study by the committee (which had produced three previous reports) on the development of the Council since its inception in 2006. The report also examined Canada's first review of its human rights record under the Universal Periodic Review (UPR) mechanism before the Council.
- The committee also continued its examination of issues related to United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 on women, peace and security, as well as its successor resolutions, ultimately tabling a report in November 2010. The report focused on two main areas: the role of women in situations of conflict and as agents of conflict resolution and peacebuilding; and, sexual violence against women and girls during war.
- Finally, in relation to this order of reference the committee undertook a study of Federal programs supporting sports and recreational activities for children and youth with disabilities further to Canada's obligations under the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. Four meetings were held in relation to this study.

With respect to its study of issues of discrimination in the hiring and promotion practices of the Federal Public Service, the committee tabled a report in June 2010, concerning the progress made by the federal government in implementing the Employment Equity Act and achieving representation rates for certain groups within the federal public service that are equivalent to their availability in the Canadian workforce. While concluding that the government was meeting many of targets, the committee made recommendations to enable the government to specifically achieve its employment equity goals in relation to visible minorities.

Just prior to the end of the fiscal year, the committee also adopted a report with respect to its study of the problem of the sexual exploitation of children, but was unable to table the report in the Senate prior to the dissolution of the Fortieth Parliament. In addition to its on-going work, the committee also received an order of reference and undertook a study relating to the role that the Government of Canada may play in supporting the promotion and protection of women's rights in Afghanistan after Canada has ended its combat operations in 2011. The committee tabled its report in December 2010, which recommended that Canada make the advancement of women's rights one of its top five priorities in Afghanistan. A number of other recommendations were also made in the areas of reconciliation, security, justice, education and development.

The committee considered two pieces of legislation during the fiscal year. Bill S-4, An Act respecting family homes situated on First Nations reserves and matrimonial interests or rights in or to structures and lands situated on those reserves, was studied by the committee and reported back to the Senate with amendments on June 15, 2010. Additionally, Bill C-3, An Act to promote gender equity in Indian registration by responding to the Court of Appeal for British Columbia decision in McIvor v. Canada (Registrar of Indian and Northern Affairs), was studied by the committee and reported back to the Senate without amendment but with observations on December 7, 2010.

The Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration has a mandate to consider all matters of a financial or administrative nature relating to the internal management of the Senate. It reviews and authorizes the budget applications of committees and sets guidelines and policies on items such as senators' travel and budget expenditures. It also presents the Estimates of the Senate for approval. Under the Rules of the Senate, this committee is authorized to carry out its mandate on its own initiative rather than being dependent on an order of reference from the Senate.

A. General Information

The committee was first created in May 1919 as the Committee on Finance, and, in 1968, it was renamed the Committee on National Finance. The committee's work is focused on matters relating to government spending. As stated in the Rules of the Senate (Rule 86(1)(g)), the committee has a mandate to examine matters related to federal Estimates generally, including:

- i. the national accounts and the reports of the Auditor General; and
- ii. Government finance.

A large part of the committee's work is devoted to a review of the government's estimates and issues arising out of that review.

Study of the Estimates and Legislation

As is customary, much of the committee's attention was focussed on the estimates, which outline the government's expenditure plans. The committee held several meetings to examine various aspects of the Government's planned expenditures for 2010-2011 and 2011-2012 including the Supplementary Estimates (A) 2010-2011, Supplementary Estimates (B) 2010-2011, and Supplementary Estimates (C) 2010-2011. During these examinations, a range of issues were brought to the attention of the Senate by the committee.

As part of its hearings on the Main Estimates 2010-2011, the committee focused on a variety of issues, including the funding and operations of regional development agencies, the funding and the operations of Atomic Energy of Canada limited, Canada Post, Infrastructure spending, and CBC/Radio-Canada. Furthermore, the Extraordinary Financing Framework was again considered by the committee. In addition, the committee spent several meetings looking at the Office of the Superintendent for Bankruptcy, and the related functions of bankruptcy trustees and credit counsellors. As is customary, the committee heard from the Public Service Commission of Canada and the Auditor General.

The committee undertook a preliminary examination of the Main Estimates, 2011-12 in March 2011, considering a variety of issues, and presented an interim report to the Senate just prior to the dissolution of the Fortieth Parliament.

Two bills were also reported by the committee:

- Bill C-9, An Act to implement certain provisions of the budget tabled in Parliament on March 4, 2010 and other measures reported with amendments; and
- Bill C-47, A second Act to implement certain provisions of the budget tabled in Parliament on March 4, 2010 and other measures reported without amendment.

The study of Bill C-47 was preceded by a study of the subject-matter of the bill, but the committee did not report separately on the pre-study.

Three other bills were referred to the committee, but not studied prior to the dissolution of the Fortieth Parliament:

- Bill S-212, An Act to amend the Excise Tax Act (tax relief for Nunavik);
- Bill S-221, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act (carbon offset tax credit); and

• Bill C-288, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act (tax credit for new graduates working in designated regions).

Special Studies

The committee undertook a comprehensive study of the costs and benefits of Canada's one-cent coin. The committee heard from a wide group of stakeholders including representatives of the federal government, financial institutions, consumer associations, the retail industry, charitable organizations, universities, collectors and foreign governments. After hearing this testimony, the committee tabled a report in December 2010, recommending that Canada remove the one-cent coin from circulation. In doing so, the committee recommended that a voluntary symmetrical rounding system be implemented, following consultation with all stakeholders including the retail and service sectors, as well as provincial and territorial governments.

Standing Committee on National Security and Defence

A. General Information

The Senate created the Standing Senate Committee on National Security and Defence during the 1st Session of the 37th Parliament, on March 15, 2001. Since its inception, the committee has studied many important issues and recommended measures to improve Canadians' security and allow Canada to contribute to global security. During the past fiscal year, the committee submitted five substantive reports to the Senate.

Two of these reports were related to legislation, Bill S-13 and Bill C-55, while a third was in reference to a motion made in the Senate on the official structural name of the Canadian navy which was referred to the committee for further study. Along with the three previously mentioned reports, the committee tabled two interim reports under its order of reference relating to its study on the national security and defence policies of Canada.

The first of these interim reports, Where we go from here: Canada's Mission in Afghanistan, was tabled in June 2010 and dealt largely with the question of whether or not the Canadian Forces should continue to play a role in Afghanistan after 2011. The second interim report, Sovereignty & Security in Canada's Arctic, was tabled in March 2011, examined the differences between the concepts of "sovereignty" and "security", and recommended the necessary steps that Canada should take to improve its presence in our far North.

In addition to these two interim reports, the committee conducted two fact-finding missions under its order of reference on the study of the national security and defence polices of Canada. The first was to Canadian Forces Base Edmonton in December 2010 while the second took place in February 2011 at which time the committee travelled to Washington, D.C.

Standing Committee on Official Languages

A. General Information

At the start of the fiscal year, the committee continued its study on the implementation of Part VII of the Official Languages Act. The purpose of the study was to evaluate the action taken by federal institutions following the amendments that had been made to Part VII of the Act in November 2005. After hearing from a number of federal departments and agencies, as well as agencies representing official language minority communities and legal experts, the committee published its report in June 2010.

In the winter of 2009, the committee began an in-depth study on English-speaking communities in Quebec. The purpose of this study was to examine the various areas that affect the development and vitality of these communities (e.g., community development, education, youth, arts and culture, health). The committee held public hearings in Ottawa and in various regions in Quebec to familiarize itself with the realities and challenges that English-speaking communities in Quebec face, and it published its report in March 2011.

In addition to studying these two topics in particular, the committee also studied the annual reports of the Commissioner of Official Languages, the Department of Canadian Heritage and the Treasury Board, as well as other issues relating to official languages, including minority-language teaching and the media and vitality in official language minority communities.

Standing Committee on Rules, Procedures and the Rights of Parliament

A. General Information

In 1968, a Standing Committee on Standing Rules and Orders was established following a report by the Special Committee on the Rules of the Senate, which had been appointed to examine the Rules and to recommend improvements. This committee was replaced in June 1991 by the Committee on Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders, which assumed the function of examining the orders, customs and privileges of the Senate, a function previously performed by the Committee on Privileges which was a committee of all the senators present during the session. In September of 2001, the committee adopted its current name to better reflect its mandate and responsibilities.

In 2010-2011, the Standing Committee on Rules, Procedures and the Rights of Parliament submitted three substantive reports. Two of them recommended amendments to the Rules of the Senate on questions of privilege and the elimination of reference to two inoperative joint committees. The committee also undertook a review of the Senate's committee structure, and made an initial report on the matter to the Senate.

Standing Committee on Transport and Communications

A. General Information

During the 3rd Session of the 40th Parliament, the committee completed its examination of the wireless sector. The committee's order of reference was to:

study emerging issues related to its communications mandate and to report on the wireless sector, including issues such as access to high-speed Internet, the supply of bandwidth, the nation-building role of wireless, the pace of the adoption of innovations, the financial aspects associated with possible changes to the sector, and Canada's development of the sector in comparison to the performance in other countries.

In its report tabled in the Senate on June 16, 2010 entitled Plan for a Digital Canada.ca, the committee urged the government to lead by example by being involved in a digital society to the extent that it looks to digital technology to run itself and to deliver its services. The report also recommended that Canada present a strategy for an inclusive digital society.

Upon completion of the wireless study, the committee began a study on the emerging issues related to the Canadian airline industry. The order of reference set our four main issues of focus: global context, domestic market, the industry's business relationship with its passengers, and the economic impact of airports. As part of this study, the committee conducted a fact-finding visit to the Ottawa International Airport.

In addition to these special studies, the committee was referred several pieces of legislation including Bill C-42, an Act to amend the Aeronautics Act (reported without amendment on March 10, 2011), Bill C-28, An Act to promote the efficiency and adaptability of the Canadian economy by regulating certain activities that discourage reliance on electronic means of carrying out commercial activities, and to amend the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission Act, the Competition Act, the Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act and the Telecommunications Act (reported without amendment on December 14, 2010), Bill S-5, An Act to amend the Motor Vehicle Safety Act and the Canadian Environmental Protection Act, 1999 (reported without amendment on June 3, 2010). Bill S-219, An Act to amend the Canada Post Corporation Act (rural postal services and the Canada Post Ombudsman) was referred to the committee but was not reported to the chamber prior to prorogation.

Standing Joint Committee for the Scrutiny of Regulations

A. General Information

The joint committee's mandate is defined by the Statutory Instruments Act, which authorizes it to review and scrutinize certain statutory instruments made after January 1, 1972. In addition to its statutory order of reference, the Senate and the House of Commons have, since 1980, renewed an order of reference at the beginning of each session authorizing the joint committee to study the means by which Parliament can better oversee and control the government regulatory process. Taken together, the statutory and sessional references of the committee provide it with a broad jurisdiction to enquire into and report on most aspects of the federal regulatory process.

In the fiscal year from April 1, 2010 to March 31, 2011, 15 meetings were held. While the committee rarely calls witnesses, it did so this fiscal year. Laureen Kinney, Director General of Aviation Security at Transport Canada, appeared before the committee in December 2010.

Special Senate Committee on Anti-terrorism

A. General Information

When the Special Senate Committee on Anti-terrorism was established in May 2010, its primary task was expected to be the review of legislation relating to anti-terrorism. While waiting for legislation to arrive at the committee stage in the Senate, the committee sought and received Senate approval to conduct a special study on matters relating to anti-terrorism. Under this order of reference, the committee decided to examine the changing nature of terrorism, including the increase in the phenomenon of home grown terrorists. To that end, the committee held 11 hearings between May 2010 and February 2011 and heard from 32 witnesses, including scholars and members of the law enforcement and intelligence communities, from countries including Canada, the United States, the United Kingdom, and Australia. In March 2011, the committee released its interim report Security, Freedom and the Complex Terrorist Threat: Positive Steps Ahead which deals with the changing threat environment, the challenges associated with terrorist investigations and prosecutions and parliamentary oversight of national security. Two major concerns were highlighted in this report: the longstanding absence in Canada of appropriate and in-depth national security parliamentary oversight and the lack of a strong research basis specific to the transition from radicalization into violence.

During the fiscal year 2010-11, the committee also studied one piece of legislation, Bill S-7, An Act to deter terrorism and to amend the State Immunity Act. After holding three hearings on this bill, the committee reported the bill without amendments but with observations on five points.
